The technical charge of murder, which was preferred against E. Lester Burnett, the motorman who had killed Conductor E. Lester Grubb at the barns of the Virginia, Balti, and Power companies several days ago, was yesterday dismissed by Justice Crutchfield in the Police Court.

The prothonotary, who heard the evidence, rendered two verdicts: the members of the jury holding Burnett responsible for the killing and the others exonerating him. The motorman was struck by Burnett's car while he was getting ready for starting out for the day's run. His body was horribly mangled and death was instantaneous.
